CONTEXT

The European Union is dealing with migration policy issues. The knowledge and understanding of human rights and non-discrimination values are the pillars of a peaceful cohabitation in a renewed European society. Education has a crucial role in this context.

AIM

The aim of the I Have Rights project is to improve secondary school teachers' skills to deal with multicultural classrooms. In this sense the acquisition of intercultural competences is crucial and needs to be based on the understanding of human rights and non-discrimination values, as tools for a change in knowledge and attitudes.

TARGET GROUP

The main target groups of the project are:

- Secondary school students and teachers
- School headmasters and administrative staff
- Policy makers and experts in the field of education

EXPECTED RESULTS

The main expected project results include:

- Survey on secondary school teachers' and students' awareness of human rights and intercultural issues
- Collection of case studies and best practices on intercultural issues, integration, non-discrimination values and human rights at school
- Guideline for teachers on "Inclusive Education"
- Publication entitled "Integration of Migrant Students at School and Human Rights"
